

WITH BELGIUM OCCUPIED GERMANS PLAN CAPTURE OF SEAPORTS IN FRANCE

GERMAN RIGHT WING RE-DOUBLES EFFORT TO BREAK THROUGH ALLIES' LINE.

FIGHTING AT DUNKIRK

French Seaport Directly South of Ostend Is Next Objective Point For Kaisers' Armies.

The German army has successfully besieged Antwerp and has swept victoriously westward along the Belgian coast until now with its right wing resting on Ostend, it forms the extreme right of the German line stretching from the North Sea to the Swiss frontier.

A great battle to determine whether the advancing German hosts will be stopped in Western Belgium or pushed on into France, seizing Dunkirk or Calais on the straits of Dover must come soon and quite possibly is being fought today. Official intelligence is markedly meagre today and this is invariably the case when the beligerents are particularly active.

The French official statement this afternoon says that the German troops occupying western Belgium have not crossed the line running from Ostend south to Mennin. The Allies troops have occupied Flenroix, and the immediate approaches to Arras and the vicinity of St. Mihiel.

Berlin announces that a gigantic battle is preparing in the eastern theatre where the Austro-German forces have taken position along the Vistula and San rivers.

Vienna state officially that fighting continued Thursday along the entire battle front from Stry and Sambor both to the south-east of Przemyśl to the mouth of the San.

The most recent advices from Petrograd claims Russian successes in Russian Poland. All agree that there is a lull in the struggle on the east Prussian frontier following battle in which neither army won a decided advantage. A correspondent at Flushing, Netherlands, reports that the greater part of the German army, after the occupation of Ostend, left for the east.

London, October 17.—Within a hundred miles of London the most critical battle viewed from its effect on the fortunes of the opening campaign at present ebbing and flowing along a line stretching through Belgium and further eastward to the French department of the North.

The Germans have prepared for a renewal of their vigorous offensive by joining their victorious troops from Antwerp to the main army.

Much more is published in British newspapers of German reinforcements than of excessive to the ranks of the allied armies.

All Belgium Occupied. Berlin, October 17.—According to announcement made in Berlin today German troops in the vicinity of Ostend have reached the North Sea and fighting is going on as far to the west as Dunkirk.

Belgium today appears to be almost completely in German possession. The French and British troops are reported as cut off on all sides, particularly around Ypres.

Trawler Blown Up. London, October 17.—The steam trawler Ajax out of Grimsby has been blown up in the North Sea by a German mine. Nine members of the crew lost their lives.

Rain Drenches Fields. Paris, Oct. 17.—A steady down-pour of rain has drenched the fields of battle. The discomforts of the troops and the difficulties of operations have been increased by the rain.

With the resumption of fighting today interest centers at the point in the long line where most important developments have been expected. The line is on the Allies' left wing.

AVIATOR IN ATTEMPT TO SET NEW RECORD

Robinson Leaves Des Moines in Long Flight to Chicago to Break American Continuous Flight Mark.

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 17.—W. C. Robinson of Grinnell, Iowa, flying a monoplane, left here at 10:55 o'clock today for Chicago in an attempt to establish a new American record for continuous flight.

He expected to cover the 350 miles without a stop and said he would land in Grant park before five o'clock this afternoon.

Robinson's route is along the tracks of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad. The flight, which is under the auspices of the Des Moines Capital and the Chicago Tribune, has the official sanction of the Arrow Club of America. The present record for continuous flight is a distance of 204 miles made by C. Mayrle Wood, an Englishman, flying a biplane, on August 8, 1913.

GERMANS ENDEAVOR TO CROSS VISTULA

Suffer Heavy Losses in Persistent Attempts to Advance Near Warsaw, Says Petrograd Report.

Petrograd, via London, Oct. 17.—According to Russian information the Germans are making "demonstrative advance" near Mlawka, northeast of Warsaw, which is intended to fill the gap between the East Prussian front and the main front which extends north and south on a line across Russian Poland.

The German army, by continuous maneuvering under heavy artillery fire and with day and night outposts fighting still is endeavoring to feel out possible chances to cross the Vistula. Refugees from that neighborhood say that until three days ago all German attempts to cross the river had been repulsed with heavy losses.

The Germans found the river too wide for pontoons, and numbers perished in attempting to ford it.

Poles in that region are said by the refugees to be hampering considerably the German advance by destroying shelter and provisions, leaving waste lands for the invaders.

Nine hundred Austrian prisoners arrived today at Mielitz.

The Telegraph expresses the opinion that this report had been received with the utmost caution.

PARCEL POST CHECK SENT TO WASHINGTON

Record for First Fifteen Days of Month Made as Records Are Being Compiled.

Postal employees at the present time are busily engaged in tabulating the final check on the parcel post business done during the first fifteen days of the month. The check of this particular federal business was requested by the postoffice department at Washington. Final figures are expected by Postmaster J. J. Cunningham to be ready for the officials about Monday or Tuesday.

The parcel post packages that entered the local office have been counted and listed, the weight taken and the amount of postage required for each recorded. The grand total number of deliveries is also kept. The same will be done to all packages sent out from the Janesville office.

This is done in order that the postal department may have a complete record of the business done in this department, permitting a first hand record of the cost of operation.

NO "PILL" PAPERS IN GREECE'S MAIL

Postoffice Department Bars Wrappers From Mails in This Country to European Nation.

Cigarette papers cannot be sent to Greece by mail, either under first or second class or by the parcel post innovation. Postmaster J. J. Cunningham's attention has been called to this phase of federal law by the Washington postoffice department and is no doubt consequent on the violation of the rule by postmasters who did not know the rule.

It was suggested that the widest publicity be given regarding the mailing of "pill papers" into that country. It is not known that any wrappers have been shipped from Janesville in the past but the order states that there have been numerous shipments from the United States at large.

Tobacco in the manufactured form, although not mentioned in the order, cannot be shipped by mail into this particular country.

One of the soldiers was shot on the temple while on duty at a railroad embankment 400 yards from the border. The civilian, a carpenter employed by a railroad, was shot through the right lung, while traversing a sidewalk on the American side of the line. The storm of bullets that resulted in the wounding of the five men was heavier than any that heretofore has struck on the American side of the boundary.

Miss Amelia Seale, head of the county bureau of public welfare, Monday suggested that the police stations be turned into employment agencies during the winter. She said that aside from the direct benefits of this new departure, the police and jobless men would be brought into closer sympathy and lost some of the spirit of antagonism.

A canvass of 1,000 of the largest industrial concerns of Chicago is about completed and will be turned over to the markets Commission. The canvass will show labor prospects for Chicago for the winter months and indicate to charitable societies to what extent their aid will be necessary.

COURT DECREE URGES DISSOLUTION OF ROAD

FEDERAL COURT PRESCRIBES DISINTEGRATION OF NEW HAVEN CONTROL.

SPLIT NEW HAVEN LINE

Decree Provides for Three Sets of Trustees to Take Over Holdings of Company.

New York, Oct. 17.—The disintegration of the great railway, trolley and transportation monopoly built up in New England during the last twelve years by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railway is prescribed in detail by decree filed today in federal court by Attorney General Gregory in the government dissolution.

The government's complaint by preliminary agreement, in so far as it applies to all defendants, individuals and corporations, with the exception of the railroad company itself. The New England Navigation company, the Boston Holding company, the Providence & Boston Railroad company, and the Boston & Maine Railroad company.

The decree provides for three sets of trustees, the first to take over the Boston & Maine holdings of the New Haven; the second to take over the trolley line holdings in Connecticut, and the third to take over the trolley line holdings in Rhode Island. The decree was filed with the clerk of the court by Attorney General Gregory and bears the signature of Federal Judge Maynor.

The three sets of trustees mentioned, in so far as the Boston & Maine and trolley line holdings in Rhode Island and Connecticut are concerned, are to manage the property subject to the orders of court until sold. Each set of trustees is composed of five men.

The directors must sell the steamship lines and must part with certain railroads brought under its domination including the Boston and Maine, forever, and by public auction if necessary. The control of the New Haven subsidiaries passes today with the filing of the decree from the road's directors, who have so long managed them, into the keeping of fifteen men named trustees to act as officers of the federal court. These men will rule these subsidiaries until such time as they are weaned by sale permanently from New Haven domination. The time limit set for the final partition varies, but in no case is it to be deferred beyond July 1, 1919.

Whether they will be linked under one management in the future, the affairs of the New Haven road and the fleet of Sound steamships operated by the New England Steamship company, is to be determined later by the court after the interstate commerce commission has heard upon application of the New Haven company for authority to retain stock in the steamship company.

In certain steamship companies, however, the New Haven is to surrender its controlling influence. The filing of the decree today closes the civil proceedings in connection with the government's investigation of the end of the investigation is yet under way.

RAIN TAKES A TURN AT SOAKING TACTICS

ELEMENTS ARE SERIOUS HINDRANCE TO POLITICIANS ON CAMPAIGN TOURS.

NEWS GOSSIP OF WEEK

Some Facts to Consider in Connection With Trade Extension Talk Now Prevalent in State.

By Ellis B. Usher.

Milwaukee, Oct. 17.—The week has been one of almost continuous rain, which has soaked a good many candidates who are out on campaign tour. So far as the promise of results at the forthcoming election are prognosticated, by men I meet and who are not in the thick of it, they would not be the wisest man I am willing that they should, so far as I am concerned, for I am not he.

The principal event of local interest with an interest that extends beyond the city, is the all opening exhibition of the Milwaukee Art society, which had its first showing last evening. It is an exhibition of Oriental, Chinese and Japanese art, including also articles from the various and interesting types of these countries. It is rather an interesting commentary upon the outside impressions of this metropolis that the Japanese gentleman who is in charge of the exhibition needed considerable persuasion to convince him that it would not be in danger of destruction in Milwaukee. Evidently our reputation for neutrality is not so clear to outsiders as it appears to be to ourselves.

South American Markets. Milwaukee and all other manufacturing centers are just now full of talk about markets in South America. New markets in countries where methods are all new to us have their drawbacks. It seems hard for many people to comprehend that the war in Europe can affect this country to its disadvantage. It is so far away, and the things that are going on there are so far from the demand for our foodstuffs and goods. But it should be borne in mind that it takes time to get readjusted to such an all-world, pervasive eruption of business, and that the had effects will be felt first. The American counsel at Vancouver, for instance, reports a sad condition there. Industries have closed down and about 2,000 persons have left Vancouver Island for the American side since the war broke out. Only 250 of whom belong in the states. I had a call last week from a man who had been employed in a good salaried position in Canada, in a copper smelting business. The concern did business almost entirely with Germany, so it shut down and he came back to hunt a job. Our own industries are similarly affected by the war, but the picture from all over Canada indicate that our wandering Americans will soon be back from there, to crowd an already full market, for employment.

Canadian Field Important. On the other hand, Canada has necessities that must be met, and this country instead of fussing about the Democratic tariff will, if it has any common sense, use the present opportunity to secure free trade with the provinces north of us, and clinch the Canadian business forever. Canada is not only the most convenient, but the cheapest market for us to reach, and now when she is cut off from Europe, it is time to get her business and her good will. She has always been our best customer, and has been buying hardware, jewelry, electrical goods, drugs, chinaware, electrical supplies and a host of other goods from us. She has purchased a great many things of the same sort from Germany. The reduction of the tariff did not amount to enough to really affect anything. It was largely buncumb on the part of the Democrats, and their bluff is now called by Republican gun shooters. The man who swallows that sort of shallow politics may look across into Canada and explain why its industries are shut down, by the "Wilson tariff." People in this country will have all the time they want to get to Mexico, and if they want employment for it, or their own labor, they had best get busy and extend their Canadian markets. At that, they will have to wait until after the election, when they need business much more than now and the Canadian opportunity is by far the best one open. Canada does business on principles that we understand and would learn Spanish or any other foreign language.

A Ten Percent Vote. There are some very potent facts that the political figures in Wisconsin, regardless of politics, persistently ignore. Some of them are saying that the recent primary showed popular interest because the vote was the largest ever cast in a primary since the primary law was adopted. The statement is, if not made in ignorance, a very dishonest one. In 1904 the number of men of voting age in Wisconsin was 570,715, and 206,345 votes were cast in the primary election that year. This year, with over 700,000 men of voting age in Wisconsin, only 211,558 votes were cast. This is an increase of less than 5,000 votes in ten years, during which the voting population increased about 130,000. It is, therefore, a very considerable falling off in the proportion of vote. As a matter of fact, no man nominated for office upon any ticket this fall polled even 10 per cent of the vote that Wisconsin ought to cast on Nov. 3 next, after making all proper allowances for stay-at-homes. This, too, will about 400 candidates for congressional, legislative and state offices campaigning for weeks. Now the number of candidates is reduced, and the strong probability is a lighter vote than was cast at the general election two years ago, when there was a three-cornered presidential fight to arouse the voters. The citizen who is enamored of the "primary principle" should therefore cheer up. "The worst is yet to come."

New Erie Tug Launched. (Advertisement.)

This month's Erie Railroad Magazine has an account of the launching of another steel tug, the "Erie" Boatman, for use in New York harbor. It is 90 feet long, 23 feet 6 inches beam, and 12 feet 6 inches deep, and powerful, as all these new harbor boats that the Erie uses on the Chicago river and in the New York terminal service. Anyone who has seen a boat of the Erie fleet has noted the fact that the Erie steamstack has four white coils and it, upon each of which, in black is painted, down the pipe, a letter of the word "ERIE," as shown in the accompanying cut. The interesting side of this trade mark to me, and I think to others, is its connection with Wisconsin. I once remarked to President Underwood that his steamboat line was a "White Collar Line," and brought to mind the old steamboat line of that name famous on the upper Mississippi immediately after the civil war, with headquarters at La Crosse. "That's where I got the idea," said Mr. Underwood. He had a large fleet of boats on the river in 1870 that handled thousands of bushels of Minnesota wheat from the "White Collar" boats that were delivered to the St. Paul road for shipment east. As I have often remarked, the Erie has all sorts of Wisconsin earmarks.

A Recent Importation. The New York Sun evidently has a jocular sense of our recent importation, now at the head of the "survey" of the University of Wisconsin. The survey is, it is now announced, an occasion for delaying the report of the state board of public affairs, that has been due since June 30. The gentleman has been prominent in New York "uplift." I judge, for the Sun speaks thus enthusiastically of him in a recent editorial.

Some amusing genius we may have robbed of his due, but to Dr. Allen we have always attributed those intimate and frank epistles in which the organization in which the president generously cared to contribute to the cause, gather all the news, expose all the rascals, commend all the good men and bear all the burden of credit for whatever of improvement the world might know with increasing zeal. There has been an assurance, a calm superiority, an assumption of responsibility about these complications that seemed to mark them as the product of an unmistakably higher spirit.

Short Notice. If Mr. Bryan is coming to Wisconsin to talk peace and soothe our Democrats with grape juice, he might just as well furnish them with dum dum bullets, as to tell them that he has designed a more deadly revenge.

Harmony is "brooding like a gentle spirit" over our Wisconsin politics. It is hard for anybody to fully appreciate it. Perhaps Villa and Carranza might.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running ear, which is often attended with deafness. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation is broken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness caused by catarrh of the Eustachian Tube, if cured by our method. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CARMEN, & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Health and Happiness at Home.

Mr. John B. Blackwood, Lockhart, S. C., writes: "My wife and I take Peruna occasionally, and we think it is the best medicine in the world. We keep it in the house. I also have a bottle of it in my tool chest, when I am away from home. I am a stone mason, and travel extensively over the country. I have caused the sale of many bottles of Peruna to my fellow workmen. Years ago I was a great sufferer from nervous indigestion, caused by catarrh. Tried everything in the way of medicine. No relief. I grew despondent. A friend told me to try Peruna. I began. It helped me at once, and finally cured me. I am a well man today."

Cured My Wife.

In a later letter Mr. Blackwood writes: "Over a year ago my wife had a spell of sickness. The doctor said it was kidney trouble and a bad stomach disease. I had two doctors for several weeks. They finally decided that she could not live. In despair, I began to give her Peruna, in small doses. In three days I could see she was getting a little stronger. In three weeks she was walking around the house. In two months she was strong and well. In all she took five bottles of Peruna. It cured her sound. After quitting the doctor she never took a thing but Peruna. It saved her life."

A Prize Baby.

In other letters from Mr. Blackwood we glean the following: "I am going to send you a picture of my baby that took the prize at the baby show. I told the judges her name was Ruth Manallin Blackwood. She has taken several bottles of your remedy, Manallin, and is the finest baby in this country. I believe your medicine saved the life of my little two-year-old boy. The doctors said he had a bad stomach, but did not help him. I gave him Manallin and it cured him. He also took Peruna at the same time. Is now sound and well. He is the picture of health and as fine a looking boy as there is in this country."

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.
A patter of little feet.
A voice that ripples low and sweet.
An eager gaze on all without;
A dream, a doubt, a laugh, a shout.
A questful heart which asketh, Whom?
A golden circle, orange bloom.
A strenuous task, a zenith sun.
A thrill of joy o'er victories won.
A clouded sky which shadows all,
A tear that drops upon the pall.
A treasure of the garnered sheaf,
A tremor of the falling leaf.
A pallid face, a broken bond—
And the great Wonder-World beyond.
—Anon.

This little word picture of life touches the voyage at every stage of the journey from dawn to the golden sunset, and suggests in a line, the environments of the seven cycles which make up the era from birth to the three score years and ten.
The first decade is the care-free period—the period which includes helplessness, the dawn of consciousness, the pattering of little feet, and the stamping around the house with the train of boots, and the noisy shout of laughter, which acts as a safety valve and frequently provides an explosion.
The period of irresponsibility, before the brain has discovered its mission, or the mind has been taught to think, and yet the most important period of the seven because destiny hangs in the balance, and the child is not accountable.
An anxious mother asked her family physician—a wise old doctor—how soon she should commence the training of her little two year old boy, and he said: "Madam, you have waited two years too long. It would have been better for the boy had your grandmother commenced the training when your mother was a girl."
That may seem quixotic and far-fetched, but the sentiment expressed is sound to the core. Back of every successful life is a foundation, and ancestry both for physical, mental and moral fibre.
Much is said about being well born, and the notion is more or less popular that "blood will tell." Down in some of the New England states, a man without a pedigree is ostracized from society, yet the fact remains that the cottage produces brain and brawn with greater regularity than the mansion, and the silver spoon acquired represents vastly more in value than the spoon inherited.
The period when we do the thinking and the planning for our children, and when the home seems so burdensome, is the green spot of life, to which memory harks back with pleasant reminiscences, as we approach the last stage of the journey. The men and women of today reflect the homes of the last generation and the responsibility is perpetual. Our successors will be what we make them, and the foundation period is of vital importance.
The second decade, including the age from ten to twenty, represents the developing years when muscles and mind compete for the ascendancy. When athletic sports and society absorb attention the body develops abnormally, like the fruit tree which runs to sap and foliage, but produces no fruit, and when the brain is top-heavy results are no more satisfactory. There is a happy medium, where every boy and girl should be held under the throne of reason is able to take control.
More men and women are spoiled in the making, during this critical period, than any other, because the task of guidance is so delicate and often so difficult, that many of us fall wide of the mark. Many of these failures are not due to lack of government, but to too much government, for we are slow to comprehend the fact that the best governed home and school, like the best governed city and state, is the least governed.
The wardens of our penitentiaries, in several western states, have recently made this discovery, and the humane treatment resulting has caused a revolution in prison methods. If there is honor among thieves, it must abound in the home and school, and imply waits for recognition and encouragement.

If the foundation of character is important, the lower story of the building is just as important, and this is what the second decade represents. Ask any man or woman, in middle life, who has made a failure of effort—for the cause—and they will tell you, as a rule, that they started wrong, back in the formative years.
These years never come to a life but once and somebody is responsible for success or failure. The state sometimes assumes responsibility by passing, and attempting to enforce, compulsory educational laws, but the state in many cases amounts to a criminal failure.
The state of Illinois has this kind of a law, and the city of Chicago, just now is cursed with the worst lot of thugs and murderers in the country, and the pity of it is that they are mostly boys, under twenty years of age.
Where did they come from and what made them criminals? They came from the homes of Chicago, and the law referred to made them what they are. They wouldn't go to school, they wanted to work, and this law prohibited, so they became street loafers and the story tells the rest.
Some of our reform laws are a travesty, and this is one of them. All the school education pounded into a boy after he is fourteen, never penetrates far below the surface, and if his reason can not be reached by appeal, work is his only salvation, and a law of any kind which deprives him of the opportunity, is a crime.
The third decade decides destiny, to large extent. The girl who fails to marry before she arrives at the age of thirty, seldom marries, and the boy who has not settled down to some legitimate calling by that time will never make much of a dent in any channel.
This is the era where young men and women find themselves. They may have started wrong through no fault of their own, but there is time to correct their error, before the serious work of life begins. Better forsake the profession for the shop, or the shop for the farm than to struggle through the long years ahead attempting to fill a square hole with a round peg. That has never been done successfully and the effort to accomplish it has caused more failures than all other causes combined.
The next three decades take in life from the ages of thirty to sixty, and long before the latter period is reached, destiny is determined and effort has resulted in either success or failure.
The man at forty has passed middle life and too much of it is behind him to warrant any radical changes in occupation. If he is a craftsman, and has not become an expert, in his particular trade, he will never become expert at anything.
This is just as true of business and the professions, and it is doubly true of the great army of clerks and office people, because they have worked so long under direction that they have lost confidence in themselves. The man who is not established for himself by the time he is thirty, takes long chances in branching out independently whether he has capital behind him or not.
Capital seeking investment is seldom interested in people who have not made a success of life, before the middle milestone is passed. Ability to accumulate money by saving it is one of the first demands of capital. That is why so many men are disappointed in efforts to secure money for business enterprises.
The years between the ages of forty and sixty should be filled with happy content, because they represent life at its best. The work so all-absorbing should be lightened by play, because there comes a time a little further on, when play is demanded, and the man who has forgotten the game has met with a loss from which he will never recover.
There are plenty of old people, sitting out the monotonous days of retirement, because they waited too long for a play spell. They planned to take life easy when all the work was done, but when the time came the companions, who had shared the hardships of the journey, had entered into rest, and the holiday was an empty mockery.
The well-rounded life, after it comes to itself and settles down for the voyage, lives by the day, and by the way, not carelessly or recklessly, but with a sense of thoughtful appreciation. It was written a long time ago, that "life is more than meat and more than raiment," and the statement is just as true today, as when it was written.
An old gentleman died in New York, the other day, at the ripe age of eighty. He succeeded to his father's business, established on lower Broadway, more than a century ago, and for fifty years had been the president of the company, which absorbed his thought and attention up to the time of his death.
His boys, men in middle life, were associated with him, but the old gentleman so overshadowed them that they lost the experience of responsibility, at an age when they needed it. The old man held on too long, perhaps not for his own happiness, but for the good of the boys who were to follow him.
This sometimes happens, and while it is true that an active life is usually a happy life, the fact remains that when men live out beyond their generation they owe something to the boys, who are to take their places.
Every age has its compensations, and the golden age is no exception to the rule. The step may be faltering, and the vision not quite so clear, but hope has found fruition in experience, and faith centers on the things unseen, while the heart refuses to grow old, in spite of the weakened tenement, scarred and battered by the weight of years. Life, at its best, is a glad anthem, from the early dawn to the going down of the sun.

On The Spur of The Moment

An Unusual Party.
The cares and worries of this life never bother him a single bit. He never quarrels with his wife, and is content, no doubt of it. He gets no peevish monthly bills, and money's naught at all to him. He never knows financial ills. He doesn't have to scrimp and trim. He takes no interest at all in things political, you see. He does not bear his country's call. No office-seeking man is he. He cares not if it's wet or dry, or bitter cold or fiercely warm. He cares not how the winds may sigh. Presaging an approaching storm. He never takes a passing glance at the official weather map. And there is not the slightest chance that he could ever care a snap. He's not afraid of footpads or of burglars who break in and steal. He never must go begging for The price to buy a good square meal. He doesn't care how prices soar. The cost of living is a joke. He never lets out a frenzied roar. The same old story, the same old story. He lets things happen as they will. And takes the good right with the bad. No hobby can give him a thrill. He's not a crank on any fad. He never speaks a word of word. About a single living soul. For gossip to him is absurd—His tongue is under strict control. "Remarkable," of course, you say. Because you see it is the very best. They buried him ten years ago.

Uncle Abner.
Everything is divided ekel in this world, and the orchestra has to play harder than the bass viol player, but he doesn't have so much to carry home. The clarinet is one of the hardest instruments to play, and it is also one of the hardest to listen to. When a feller cannot make up his mind what his sphere in life is, it seems as though he generally goes into the life insurance business. The hardest kind of feller to entertain is one who doesn't smoke, drink, chew tobacco, gamble, play golf or talk about his neighbors. A feller goes back to the old home town but he never comes back, shiftless, and if he goes back flush, they say he is a crook, and there you are. I never saw a woman who could drive a nail or one who couldn't drive a nail. There may be a difference between eye-glasses and nose-glasses, but if there is one, it has never been revealed to me. They say nothing is impossible in this world, but I don't believe the suffragets will ever wear suspenders and smoke corncob pipes.

The Football Idol.
Erasmus was the huskiest of all the College team. His kicking was a classic and his running was a scream. The enemy all took to flight, their terror ill-concealed. Whenever he grabbed the pigskin and went tearing down the field. He was the very limit in the strenuous business of passing. To ask a man to tackle him was nothing but a crime. He was the strongest man they'd had in twenty-seven years. He always left the field beaten with arms and legs and ears. But back home in vacation time, his strength just failed. I vow, he was so weak he couldn't think of following the plow. He couldn't hoe potatoes and he couldn't split the wood. Although he told his parents he would like to if he could. He simply seemed to pine away and dwindle as a rule. Till in the fall when time came he was so weak he couldn't go to school. Then he'd recover suddenly and take an awful brace. In feats of strength a deal depends upon the time and place.

NEWSPAPER CLIPPINGS.
Warden Edmund M. Allen, of the Illinois state prison at Joliet, has refused to allow a petition to be circulated among the convicts appealing to the legislature for prohibition laws. The stand taken by the warden is that the convicts are disfranchised and cannot legally sign a petition.
A plan is being tried in Chicago, whereby only unemployed men are picked to serve on a coroner's jury. So far this method has worked well in affording the laboring man chance to support his family.
Horace Baggs, who helped clear the forest which now the site of Racine, Wisconsin, died at Superior, Wis., at the age of 96 years. Baggs was a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln and was acquainted with Andrew Jackson and Franklin Pierce. His body was buried in the Elkhorn cemetery.
D. J. McGenty of Superior claims a record in the federal postoffice service having served for twenty-two years and only missed during that time two and a half days, due to illness.
Five hundred members of the National council of Industrial Safety meeting in Chicago, pledged themselves as an organization in fighting liquor traffic. Over a million men are employed by the representatives at this meeting.

PLEASANTLY SURPRISED ON WEDDING ANNIVERSARY
Evansville, Oct. 17.—The following "walked in" on Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Robinson Wednesday forenoon at 11 o'clock, pleasantly reminding them that the day was their sixth wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Guy Bernard, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Bernard, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Robinson, George Emery, Miss Ida Emery and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Bernard. A bounteous basket of the guests. The "bride" cut the cake which was made by Miss Ida Emery and was a handsome nut cake with six candy roses; on the top. Each rose had six petals, to again remind them of the day. "Bride and groom" were presented with a set of dishes and casserole. The guests remained until evening.

Entertained.
Messdames and J. M. Evans entertained Thursday at a coffee at the latter's home.
Baby Show.
A very novel and impromptu "baby show" was held at the Guy Bernard home last evening. Seven ladies of the neighborhood, with children, were asked to spend the afternoon, and it was discovered that of the eleven children the oldest was but four years and the youngest ninety months. The children were weighed and measured. Light refreshments were served and a pleasant social afternoon resulted.

POSITIVELY MASTERS CROUP.
Foley's Honey and Tar Compound cuts the thick croupy mucus, and clears the phlegm. Opens up the air passages and stops the hoarse cough. The gasping, strangling fight for breath gives way to quiet breathing and peaceful sleep. Harold Berg, Mass., Mich., writes: "We give Foley's Honey and Tar to our children for croup and it always acts quickly." No wonder a man in Texas walked 15 miles to the store to get a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Every user is a friend.

British Suffragists Are Loyal To Country When War Call Sounds

(Correspondence of Associated Press.)
London, October 17.—The women suffragists are doing fine work in relieving distress caused by the war. The votes for women propaganda has been abandoned completely for the present and many of the organs are placing all of their resources at the service of needy women. In London alone there are some 60,000 women who were earning their own living before the war but who have since become destitute, many facing starvation.
The Active Service League of the National Union of Woman's Suffrage Societies, which includes in its ranks over 500 societies which have been working for suffrage by constitutional means, has organized relief in its offices in a shop on Parliament street, and the branch offices throughout the country are also filled with suffragists working for their country. The workers distinguish themselves by wearing a uniform consisting of dark blue coat and skirt, green felt hats, with badges and ties of red and green—the Union's colors.
The assistance of German women and girls stranded in London is included in the relief program.
The Union has had many offers of hospitality for stranded people, and many private school mistresses have offered free education for daughters of officers killed in action. Several workrooms have been started where out-of-work women are paid 10 shillings a week of 40 hours—the Trade Unions rate—for making garments which are given to destitute people.
Many pathetic cases have been aided. A British girl, a children's nurse

AMERICAN WOMAN IS HEAD OF RED CROSS

Lady Beatrix Barclay, American Wife of British Minister at Bucharest, is one of the principal workers in the Ambulance Department of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, which is the senior Red Cross organization in England. Lady Beatrix Barclay is an American, the daughter of the late Henry G. Chapman of New York, and great-granddaughter of John Jay, the first American minister to England.
Five thousand men belonging to the St. John Ambulance Brigade have been mobilized and are serving with the British army and navy in hospital ordies, and several thousand more have volunteered for the work. The society has sent out 133 highly trained nurses to tend the wounded on the battle field and are in waiting. Much of the work of the ambulance bearers, and even the nurses is performed under fire.
The Duchess of Bedford and the Earl of Plymouth are two of the most active workers in the organization. Its activities are not limited to British soldiers and sailors, but its workers are instructed to tend the wounded of all nationalities without discrimination.

AMERICAN WOMAN INSISTS ON HAVING HER SHARE OF FUNDS SENT TO ENGLAND

(Correspondence of Associated Press.)
London, Oct. 17.—Major D. W. Ketchum, one of the American officers sent over to London to administer the fund appropriated by congress as a loan to stranded tourists, relates this experience, illustrating the faith of a certain class of Americans in the generosity of Uncle Sam.
One day a young woman called at the Major's office and said that she wanted the $500 due her.
Thinking that she was one of those for whom money had been deposited by friends with the state department, the officer asked for proof. He got it. The tourist produced a letter written to her by her father. In this letter the father said that Congress has appropriated $300,000 for the Americans in England, and dividing it by the number estimated to be there, he thought her pro rata should be $500, advising her to insist upon her rights.
The applicant admitted having sufficient funds, but said she considered the money a form of compensation for the nervous strain of being caught in Europe in war time. She left Major Ketchum's office with the air of one who had deprived of her dues.

YANKEE NEWSPAPER MEN UNABLE TO INTERVIEW "WAR LORD" KITCHENER

(Correspondence of Associated Press.)
London, Oct. 17.—At least two American newspaper men have tried to make the Sphinx talk. They have tried to interview Lord Kitchener. It is a task no British reporter would set for himself. One American reporter received a polite note from a secretary saying Lord Kitchener was too busy. With what he can prove that he tried the impossible.

WHITESTER PEOPLE ARE INDIGNANT OVER RECITAL

Whitewater, Oct. 17.—Whitewater residents are most indignant over the recital which was given at the recital which was held on Oct. 12th, by a Miss Genevieve Howard of Boston. It appears that early in September a J. S. Howard appeared in Whitewater and sought to secure the endorsement of the Federation of Women's Clubs for a recital to be given by his daughter on Oct. 12th. Failing in his attempt, he secured a subscription list of fifty citizens agreeing to take three tickets at two dollars to guarantee the expenses. Evidently his subject found favorable response and he managed to dispose of his tickets. A few days before the recital date each ticket purchaser received a note stating Miss Howard would appear on the program.

Part of the audience were kept at home by a down-pour of rain, and they were the fortunate ones. There were but two intermissions during the recital, and the audience was so small that it was not possible to have three intermissions, there might have been none to listen during the last act. The Whitewater Gazette is worth noting.

"A small but select audience listened to a Shakespearean recital at the Congregational church Monday night by Miss Genevieve Howard of Boston. She wore a gorgeous gown with a train longer than any seen on the Badger railroad, and had on gilt slippers with which to kick it into her. Some complained because she could not read Shakespeare, which she couldn't, and left after the first sample, but a few heroically resolved to spend an evening along with their dollars and stuck it out to the finish."

THE HOME HELPERS' LEAGUE PROGRESSES

Latest Rapidly Filling Up—Still Places
For Many More to List Their Names.

That the project of forming a co-operative association of women who have spare time to aid other women who are too busy otherwise, in household duties and other tasks, meeting with popular favor, is evidenced by the numerous replies that have been received from persons desiring their names listed and also requests for help. The committee in charge of the plan are much encouraged, but suggest that there must be many more who have not yet listed their names who would be glad to do so and asks the Gazette to make another announcement of the purposes of the proposed association.

It is purely a co-operative organization, the object of the committee most interested in its success. "It is designed to be an aid to both the busy woman at home with far more tasks than she can handle, and the woman who has spare time at her disposal, who would be glad to exchange it for money. It is bringing these two together, there are lots of women who would help not only in the home itself but outside of it. Who would like to have some one they could ask to come in to help serve a luncheon, to do some mending, to care for the children, to help with the laundry, to give the tired mother an outing. Women who could either come into the home and do the baking or do it at home. Cleaning silver, glove making, sweeping and dusting, special laundry work, fine linens and such that one does not like to send out of the house to have done nor put in the regular family wash. Window cleaning, in fact the thousand and one little matters that go to make up the household work. There are a lot of women who have time on their hands who would be glad to fill the spare time and earn money for their very own. Some may actually need it, others to add to their income. It is co-operative. One woman has labor to sell, the other wants to buy it and we plan to help them together if possible. There are lots of young girls with oodles and oodles of spare hours who would be glad of the opportunity to help them pass their time away. Who would like lots of work conducting the home of their own they expect to own later, who should register. The list is not completed yet, and we would be glad to receive more names so as to help them properly. We already have had numerous applications for workers, some of which have been filled, others will be later. With winter coming on there will be plenty of work for all who want it. The Gazette will forward to the committee in charge all names filed and the following list of possible occupations is re-printed so that all may understand what is wanted:

Mending.
Making buttonholes.
Embroidery.
Cheeseing.
Care of children (day time or evening).

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—It Does Make Some Difference Whose Goods It Is—

BY F. LEIPZIGER

Died as He Lived.

"Foreman is gone, poor chap. Died without a struggle." Just like Basemant he never was known to exert himself in anything.

To Mend Celluloid.

Any article made of celluloid may be mended with collodion. Scratch the broken edges to be mended with a sharp knife until a smooth surface is secured. Apply the collodion and press tightly together for several minutes. Let stand at least twenty-four hours. Liquid court plaster will answer as well, since the main ingredient is collodion.

The Last Shot

By FREDERICK PALMER

(Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons)

"This moment I've lived for!" exclaimed Westerling. "Our infantry is starting up the apron of Engadir! We held back the fire of the heavy guns concentrated for the purpose of supporting the men with an outburst. Three hundred heavy guns pouring in their shells on a space of two acres! We're tearing their redoubts to pieces! They can't see to fire! They can't live under it! They're in the crater of a volcano! When our infantry is on the edge of the wreckage the guns cease. Our infantry crowd in—crowd into the house that Partow built. He'll find that numbers count; that the power of modern gunfire will open the way for infantry in masses to take and hold vital tactical positions! And—no, their fire in reply is not as strong as I expected."

"Because they are letting you in! It will be strong enough in due season!" thought Marta in the uncontrollable triumph of antagonism. Five against three was in his tone and in every line of his features.

"It's hard for a soldier to leave a sight like this, but the real news will be awaiting me at my desk," he concluded, adding, as he turned away: "It's fireworks worth seeing, and if you remain here I will return to tell you the results."

Turning her back to the range for the moment, she saw the twinkle of the lights of the town and the threads of light of the wagon-trains and the sweep of the lights of the railroad trains on the plain; while in the foreground every window of the house was ablaze, like some factory on a busy night shift. She could hear the click of the telegraph instruments already reporting the details of the action as cheerfully as Brobdingnagian crickets in their peaceful surroundings. Then out of the shadows Westerling reappeared.

"The apron of Engadir is ours!" he called. "Thanks to you!" he added with pointed emphasis. Back in the house he had received congratulations with a nod, as if success were a matter of course. Before her, exultation unbent stiffness, and he was hoarsely triumphant and eager. "It's plain sailing now," he went on. "A break in the main line! We have only to drive home the wedge, and then—then!" he concluded.

She felt him close, his breath on her cheek. "Peace!" she hastened to say, drawing back instinctively.

And then! The irony of the words in the light of her knowledge was pointed by a terrific renewal of the thunders and the flashes far up on the range, and she could not resist rejoicing in her heart.

"That's the Browns!" exclaimed Westerling in surprise. The volume of fire increased. With the rest of the frontier in darkness, the Engadir section was an isolated blaze. In its light she saw his features, without alarm but hardening in dogged intensity.

"They've awakened to what they have lost! They have been rushing up reserves and are making a counter-attack. We must hold what we have gained, no matter what the cost!" His last sentence was spoken over his shoulder as he started for the house.

Without changing her position, hardly turning her head, she watched until the firing began to lessen rapidly. Then she heard his step. She rose to face him, summoning back the spirit of the actress.

"This is better yet! I came to tell you that the counter-attack failed!" he said as he saw her appear from the shelter of the arbor.

She wondered if she were going to fall. But the post of the trellis was within reach. She caught hold of it to steady herself. Failed!

"The killing—it must have been terrible!" her mind at last made her exclaim to cover her tardiness of response to his mood.

"You thought of that—as you should

—as I do!" he said.

He took her hands in his, pulsing warm with the flowing red of his strength. She let them remain listlessly, as if she had not the will to take them away, the instinct of her part again dominant. To him this was another victory, and it was discovery—the discovery of melting weakness in her for the first time, which magnified his sense of masculine power. He tightened his grip slightly and she shuddered.

"You are tired!" he said, and it hurt her that he should be so considerate. "The killing—to end that! It's all I want!" she breathed miserably.

"And the end is near!" he said. "Yes, now, thanks to you!"

"Thanks to her! And she must listen and submit to his touch!"

"Then engineers and material were ready to go in," he continued. "Before morning, as I had planned, we shall be so well fortified in the position that nothing can budge us. This success so strengthens my power with the staff and the premier that I need not wait on Fabian tactics. I am supreme. I shall make the most of the demoralization of this blow to the enemy. I shall not wait on slow approaches in the hope of saving life. Tomorrow I shall attack and keep on attacking till all the main line is ours."

"Now you are playing your real part, the conqueror!" she thought gladly. "Your kind of peace is the ruin of another people; the peace of a helpless enemy. That is better—better for her conscience. Unwittingly, she allowed her hands to remain in his. In the paralysis of despair she was unconscious that she had hands. She felt that she could endure anything to retrieve the error into which she had been the means of leading the Browns. And the killing—it would not stop, she knew. No, the Browns would not yield until they were decimated.

"We have the numbers to spare. Numbers shall press home—home to terms in their capital!" Westerling's voice grew husky as he proceeded, harsh as orders to soldiers who hesitated in face of fire. "After that—after that—the tone changed from harshness to desire, which was still the desire of possession—the fruits of peace, a triumph that I want you to share!" He was drawing her toward him with an impulse of the force of this desire, when she broke free with an abrupt, struggling pull.

"Not that! Not that! Your work is not yet done!" she cried. He made a move as if to persist, then he fell back with a gesture of understanding.

"Right! Hold me to it!" he exclaimed resolutely. "Hold me to the bargain! So a woman worth while should hold a man worth while."

"Yes!" she managed to say, and turned to go in a sudden impetus of energy. Half running, half stumbling, the light of the lantern bobbing and trembling weirdly, she hastened through the tunnel. Usually the time for taking the receiver down till Lanny replied was only a half minute. Now she waited what seemed many minutes without response. Had the connections been broken? To make sure that her impatience was not tricking her she began to count off the seconds. Then she heard Lanstron's voice, broken and hoarse:

"Marta, Marta, he is dead! Partow is dead!"

many minutes without response. Had the connections been broken? To make sure that her impatience was not tricking her she began to count off the seconds. Then she heard Lanstron's voice, broken and hoarse:

recovering himself, Lanstron told the story of Partow's going, which was in keeping with his life and his prayers. As the doctor put it, the light of his mind, turned on full voltage to the last, went out without a flicker. Through the day he had attended to the dispositions for receiving the Grays' attack, enlivening routine as usual with flashes of humor and reflection ranging beyond the details in hand. An hour or so before dark he had reached across the table and laid his big, soft palm on the back of Lanstron's hand. He was thinking aloud, a habit of his in Lanstron's company, when an idea requiring gestation came to him.

"My boy, it is not fatal if we lose the apron of Engadir. The defenses behind it are very strong."

"No, not fatal," Lanstron agreed. "But it's very important."

"And Westerling will think it fatal. Yes, I understand his character. Yes—yes; and if our counter-attack should fail, then Miss Galland's position would be secure. Him-m-m—those whom the 'gods' would destroy—him-m-m. Westerling will be convinced that repeated, overwhelming attacks will gain our main line. Instead of using engineering approaches, he will throw his battalions, masses upon masses, against our works until his strength is spent. It would be baiting the bull. A risk—a risk—but, my boy, I am going to—"

Partow's head, which was bent in thought, dropped with a jerk. A convulsion shook him and he fell forward onto the map, his brave old heart in its last flutter, and Lanstron was alone in the silent room with the dead and his responsibility.

"The order that I knew he was about to speak, Marta, I gave him," Lanstron concluded. "It seemed to me an inspiration—his last inspiration—to make the counter-attack a feint."

"And you're acting chief of staff, Lanny? You against Westerling?"

"Yes."

The colonel of the 128th and Captain Fracasse were eating their biscuits together and making occasional remarks rather than holding a conversation.

"Well, Westerling is a field-marshal," said the colonel.

"Yes, he's got something out of it!"

"The men seem to be losing spirit—there's no doubt of it!" exclaimed the colonel, more aloud to himself than to Fracasse, after a while.

"No wonder!" replied Fracasse. "Martinet though he was, he spoke in grumbling loyalty to his soldiers. 'What kind of spirit is there in doing the work of navvies? Spirit! No soldiers ever fought better—in invasion, at least. Look at our losses! Spirit! Westerling drives us in. He thinks we can climb Niagara Falls! He—'"

"Stop! You are talking like an anarchist!" snapped the colonel. "How can the men have spirit when you feel that way?"

"I shall continue to obey orders and do my duty, sir!" replied Fracasse. "And they will, too, or I'll know the reason why."

There was a silence, but at length the colonel exploded: "I suppose Westerling knows what he is doing!"

"Still we must go on! We must win!"

"Yes, the offensive always wins in the end. We must go on!"

"And once we have the range—yes, once we've won our vital position—the men will recover their enthusiasm and be crying: 'On to the capital!'"

"Right! We were forgetting history. We were forgetting the volatility of human nature."

Far up on a peak among the birds and aeroplanes, in a roofed, shell-proof chamber, with a telephone orderly at his side, a powerful pair of field-glasses and a telescope before his eye, Gustave Feller, one time gardener and now acting colonel of artillery, watched the burst of shells over the enemy's lines. While other men had grown lean on war, he had taken on enough flesh to fill out the wrinkles around his eyes that shone with an artist's enjoyment of his work. Down under cover of the ridge were his guns, the keys of the instrument that he played by calls over the wire. Their barking was a symphony to his ears; errors of orchestration were errors in aim. He talked as he watched, his lively features reflective of his impressions.

"Oh, pretty! Right into their tumblers! Right in the nose! La, la, la! But that's off—and so's that! Tell Battery C they're fifty yards over. Oh, beady-eyed gods and shiny little fishes—two smacks in the same spot! Humph! Tell Battery C that the trouble with that gun is worn rifling; that's why it's going short. Elevate it for another hundred yards—but it ought not to wear out so soon. F'd like to kick the maker of the inspector. The fellows in B 21 will accuse us of inattention. It's time to drop a shell on them to show we're perfectly impartial in our favors. La, la, la! Oh, what a pretty smack! Congratulations!"

B 21 was the position of Fracasse's company and the pretty smack the one that broke one man's arm and crushed another's head.

The "God with us!" song was singularly suited to the great, bull voice of its composer, born to the red and become Captain Stransky in the red business of war. It was he who led the throng of its verses.

Mrs. Simmons, talking—"No," she said, "I always do my own shopping and always buy the supplies for the kitchen. I can't trust my husband to do anything of that sort. He hasn't a bit of judgment. A dry goods clerk or a grocer can poke any kind of stuff on him at twice its value."

"That's the way with most men," responded the caller. "By the way, what is your husband's profession?"

"He runs a business college downtown," said Mrs. Simmons.

A certain major in the Philippines managed in some way always to get leave just before trouble with the natives was due. His colonel suspected him of having no stomach for fighting.

"Some day," remarked the colonel, "they'll want to give that fellow a decoration, and I'll suggest one. It will be a wreath of leaves of absence."

Dinner Stories

The cannibal picked his teeth reflectively. "Of course," he observed, "I have eaten worse specimens than the late governor, but—"

He selected a cigar with a perfect shape.

"I can't understand why they always said 'your excellency' when they addressed him."

"Who is the most popular man in your club?"

"I am."

"Isn't it rather conceited of you to say so?"

"Oh, no; it is merely equivalent to saying that I lose more money at poker than any of the other members."

BAD OPERATION AVOIDED

By Timely Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Sowers' Own Statement.

Hodgdon, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."

—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Hodgdon, Maine.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

A HUNDRED MILLION IN DAIRY PRODUCTS

WISCONSIN'S ANNUAL OUTPUT
AMOUNTS TO THIS FIGURE,
SAYS EMERY'S REPORT.

INCREASE IS ENORMOUS

Value of Butter, Cheese and Milk
Advances 85 Per Cent in Five Years.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Oct. 17.—Wisconsin's annual output of dairy products exceeds $100,000,000. That is the startling statement contained in the forthcoming biennial report of Dairy and Food Commissioner J. Q. Emery. This is an increase of more than 85 per cent in five years, the United States census report for 1910 giving the total value of all Wisconsin dairy products for 1909 as $53,368,028.

While Mr. Emery's figure is an estimate rather than a compilation, the same is admitted to be true of those in the United States census report. Mr. Emery says that his estimate is conservative and he tells of how he made his computations. Following is his estimate of the value of all Wisconsin dairy products for the year 1913:

Pounds.	Value.
Creamery butter.....110,751,073	$ 31,010,000
Farm made butter.....22,935,469	5,733,867
Factory made cheese.....189,524,029	28,428,500
Farm made cheese.....667,720	101,659
Condensed milk.....39,554,029	6,845,706
Milk other than that of milked cheese factories, creameries and condensers.....	9,867,000
Estimated market cream including that used for ice cream manufacture.....	3,500,000
Estimated value of milk and cream shipped to Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Dubuque and other points outside of Wisconsin.....	2,854,500
Skim milk.....	9,058,107
Whey.....	2,738,761

Total.....$100,000,000
"These figures were compiled as follows," says Mr. Emery. "For the number of pounds of creamery butter, the number of pounds reported in the thirteenth United States census, based upon the year 1909, was increased by one-half the average annual percentage of increase of the years 1905 to 1909 inclusive, and the value of this butter was estimated at the average price of Wisconsin butter sold during the years 1910, 1911, 1912 and 1913, as reported in the year-book of the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., and as elsewhere published in this report."

"For the number of pounds of farm made butter the number reported in the thirteenth United States census for the year 1909 was decreased by the average annual percentage of decrease for the years 1905 to 1909 inclusive. The value of this butter was estimated at 5 cents a pound."

"For the number of pounds of factory made cheese, the number of pounds reported in the thirteenth United States census based upon the year 1909 was increased by the average annual percentage of increase for the years 1905 to 1909 inclusive, and the value of this cheese was estimated at 15 cents a pound."

"For the number of pounds of farm made cheese, the number reported in the thirteenth United States census for the year 1909 was decreased by the average annual percentage of decrease for the years 1905 to 1909 inclusive. The value of this cheese was estimated at 15 cents a pound."

"The figures for the amount and value of condensed milk were obtained by increasing the amount and value of the same as reported in the biennial report of the dairy and food commissioner for 1911-12 in the ratio which the number of condenseries in operation at the time the figures given in that report were obtained from the condenseries."

"The amount of milk produced on the farms and not sold to creameries, cheese factories and condensers was estimated as the amount of daily consumption by the total population of the state. In estimating this amount, the data given by Major Alvord, former chief of the dairy division of the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, derived from the census of 1909, have been used. Major Alvord found that the average annual consumption of milk per capita was 230.1 pounds."

"The estimate of the value of market cream, including that used for ice cream manufacture, is based upon the observation of members of the dairy and food department and the amount of cream sold in 1909 as reported in the thirteenth United States census."

"The value of milk and cream shipped to Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Dubuque and other points outside of Wisconsin was estimated from data obtained by representatives of the department in their field work."

"In the estimate made of the value of skim milk, the Gurler method, recommended by Prof. W. A. Henry as the most reliable, was used and is as follows: The value of skim milk when fed with corn is one-half as much per 100 pounds as shelled corn is per bushel and the value of whey is one-half of skim milk. The lowest Chicago cash price per bushel for No. 2 corn as reported in the year-book of the United States department of agriculture was 84 cents. In determining the amount of skim milk, it is estimated that one pound of butter represents 20 pounds of skim milk. In determining the amount of whey it is estimated that one pound of cheese represents nine pounds of whey."

FLOATING LABORERS DRIFTING SOUTHWARD

Vanguard of Unemployed Appearing in City on Way South or to Chicago from Harvest Fields.

The vast annual flight from the northern states to the south or big cities where the floating laborers spend the winter months. During the past week hundreds of them have dropped off in Janesville, stayed a few days or hours and then moved on by means of a convenient freight train or "blind baggage." Nightly there are many of the vagrants who seek a night's shelter at the city hall police station for a "hop" as the tramp trade expresses it. Every fall the army leaves their way back when the cold weather sets in. The unusual weather of late has hastened the flight this year, but those that have arrived promise to be a vanguard of those to follow. Most of the "gentry" are without funds, having "went through their summer earnings" and are now attempting to live on the people by begging, stealing, asking aid of pedestrians, giving a sad story to separate themselves from the police, as they are there called by the police, in the station, who were released this morning with the instructions not to let any more grow under their feet. Police P. D. Ing Janesville believes that they are safer behind locked bars than out in the streets, sleeping in the parks, freight cars and railroad buildings and has given instructions that suspicious vagrants are to be brought to the station for the night.

As high as twenty-eight were harbored in the "bull pen" at the city hall station last year, but the average attendance during the colder nights is from four to six of the vagrants. In case there are criminal methods made, the police will adopt rigid methods of dealing with the vags, advocating a ninety-day working term to advertise others of the tramp kingdom to give Janesville a wide berth. Occasionally among the vagrants will be a former notorious criminal too old and crippled to ply the nefarious trade, who has become a true down and outer, applying for lodging at the city hall. Contrary to expectation, the majority of the floating laborers are comparatively young men in the prime of life, who appear to entertain any hope of competition to work, but rather expect a living off the world.

PRIMARY FOUND TO BE FAULTY, MANY DECLARE

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 17.—While congressmen in Washington have debated resolutions to investigate the campaign expenditures of Roger Sullivan, democratic candidate for senator from Illinois, legislators back home have been and still are pondering the much weightier and farther reaching problem whether or not the system of primary elections by which Sullivan, Lawrence Y. Sherman and Raymond Robbins respectively, became democratic republican and progressive candidates for the Illinois toga, is essentially faulty and will have to be revised.

Though the Illinois primary cost the state a little over a million dollars about seven thousand dollars for every state and legislative candidate nominated—it is being generally conceded that on the main the same men would have been nominated by party convention and caucus—and the million would have been saved.

And probably much more than one million would have been saved to the twelve hundred odd candidates who entered the primary, in large expenditures for advertising, canvassing and maintaining headquarters. For though no one in Illinois kept any available record of Candidate Sullivan's campaign expenses, a superficial survey of his extensive advertising and campaigning leads to the conclusion that the nomination costs thousands of dollars. The same is true of other candidates in greater or less degree.

The primary furnished a striking reputation by example of the claims that primaries serve to effect to offset the influence of party organizations and machines. Sullivan was the candidate of the Democratic party organizations, with the endorsement of Governor Dunne, Mayor Harrison of Chicago and Secretary of State Bryan could muster serious opposition. Sullivan would have been nominated by a party convention. On the Republican ticket, Senator L. Y. Sherman was renominated with the support of the surviving party organization of former governor Deeney and Roy O. West, chairman of the state central committee. Sherman would have been nominated by a Republican convention. On our Progressive ticket, Raymond Robbins, Illinois exponent of Rooseveltism, was easily nominated. Robbins would have been nominated, probably unanimously, by a state convention.

Then why the millions of expense, is the question being asked from several quarters.

So many inquiries have been received with reference to the prevention of dry rot on green gage plums, and complaints that spraying did not prevent it, that inquiry was made of the college of agriculture with reference to it which brought the following reply. It indicates that something should be done at once in order to secure a crop next year.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 7, 1914.
Mr. Allen B. West,
Janesville, Wisconsin.

Dear Sir:
Your letter is received.

Relative to the brown rot on your green gage plums I will say that it is rather difficult to control the brown rot on any of the European plums at the time of ripening, or just prior to this. The only method by which you can hope to control this disease includes not only thorough spraying but also sanitation. I would suggest that as many of the fallen plums as possible be collected and destroyed.

All the mushrooms hanging on the trees should be removed during the winter. Then start your spraying early—before growth starts even using a strong Bordeaux mixture, or you may use even the clear copper sulphate solution. Then continue with the regular orchard spraying program, and continue it well through the season. Also early in the spring plow the land under the trees or spade it up, turning all the surface under so that any of the fallen plums which may have been killed will be buried deep in the soil. Thus the spores which might have developed from them cannot find their way to the plant.

Very respectfully,
JAMES C. MOORE,
Associate Horticulturist.
How to Make Butter Come.
Question—I have two cows and having more milk and cream than I can use, I occasionally make butter, but have trouble in making the butter come sometimes I churn for hours and then it won't come. Please tell me what to do.

Answer—There are many factors entering into the production of good butter and in making butter come, so that it is rather difficult to determine from the limited data given just what the trouble is. The milk from some cows churns more readily than from others and cream from a fresh cow requires as a rule less churning than from the same cow at a later period. Perhaps the most common reason for failure to make butter come is that the cream is not at the right temperature, which is 60 degrees. One should not try to churn without a dairy thermometer, which will give the correct temperature for churning and cream should be brought to that temperature before churning is attempted.

Cream that is very thick should be thinner with water and the churn should not be more than half full, as cream swells in churning. Cream from different settings of milk should be thoroughly mixed before attempting to churn. Farmers' Bulletin No. 241, of the U. S. department of agriculture—Butter Making on the Farm—contains a helpful discussion of the theory and practice of churning and from this undersigned on application at the high school.

"Home of Character, No. 209"

A Modern English Home—By John Henry Newson.

This design, 34x33 feet carried out in brick and frame, after the style of the modern English architect, is one that affords the utmost sunlight upon the interior. The brick is a red velvet brick with a raked-out joint, and the large gable upon the front is cement plastered, colored a very light cream color, as also the plaster in the panels on the side bays and gables. The flat bay upon the front, which is in reality recessed from the wall line, and the oriel window over the dining room group of windows as well as the spindled porch are features highly commendable, and coupled with the twin gable on the side makes this home one that has exceedingly good architectural expression.

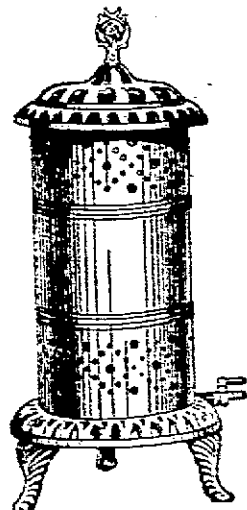

The living room and hall are designed to be finished in the same wood and color and are separated by wood posts with bookcases between the posts and the jambs of the opening. The fireplace at the side of the living room is on axis with this bookcase feature and also on axis with the stairs to the second floor, a feature giving symmetry seldom gained and always sought for in planning the better class of house. The seat on the side and rear of the living room forms the completion of the mantel design in a way which is novel and artistic. A rear hall gives access from the kitchen to the front door and the dining room has a built-in buffet. The entrance stoop has a tiled floor, as also the porch across the rear. This feature of the rear porch has been carried out because of the landscape work in gardens at the rear of the house, it being far more desirable to overlook a quiet, peaceful and well planned garden than a vista afforded by a noisy and dusty street. The second floor has three bedrooms, each with closets, and a den off of the stair landing. The bathroom is over the kitchen, and a sleeping porch is provided on the rear off of the main bedroom. The attic is finished with a servants' room and a large room. The space to properly describe this house is lacking, but complete information will be gladly given to anyone interested.

It is difficult to make an average estimate of the cost of a house of this character, as this cost in the neighborhood of $8000. Mr. Newson will gladly answer inquiries concerning No. 209 and workmanship used. It should be built for about $6000 with a good grade of material throughout.

This home deserves the careful study of anyone contemplating the erection of a house to cost in the neighborhood of $8000. Mr. Newson will gladly answer inquiries concerning No. 209 or any other home appearing on this page from week to week. Give the number of the home concerning which you inquire, and address the envelope to "John Henry Newson, Homes of Character Department, The Gazette."

This service by Mr. Newson is free to all Gazette readers.

She shrugged slightly. "Who knows why one fails? I did my best: he was too much for me, outwitted me at every turn. Time and again I thought I had him, but always he escaped, either by his own wit and courage or with another's aid. Only yesterday night they were all three in the hollow of my hands—but now I bring you only Rose."

She faltered, awed by the glare of his infuriated eyes. "Let me explain," she begged.

He snapped her short: "You cannot explain. The thing is impossible, that you should have failed. There is something beneath this, something you will not tell me."

She endeavored to speak, but he enforced silence with a sonorous "No!" His hand sought the row of buttons on the desk and pressed one long.

Almost instantly a servant glided noiselessly into the room.

"My daughter Rose—have her brought here to me at once!"

In another moment the replica of his daughter Judith was ushered into his presence.

Upon this one he loosed the lightnings of his wrath without ruth.

Rose suffered him in silence. His most gallant reprimand elicited no retort from this one.

In a lull in Trine's tirade, Judith chose to interject: "Don't be so hard on the silly fool: she's not responsible; she's sick with love for that good-looking simpleton!"

"And you!" Rose turned on her passionately—"what about you? If I love Alan Law, at least I love him openly. I am not ashamed to own it—and I don't pursue him, as you do, pretending I mean to sacrifice him to a wicked family feud, and then spare him every time I meet him, to lead him to believe I haven't the heart to injure him—as you do, hoping so, to work upon his sympathies and earn a kindly word and a pat on the head from his hand!"

Fiercely she leveled a denunciatory arm at her sister. "There!" she cried to her father—"if you need to know—there stands the daughter who has betrayed your faith—as I have not, who have never even pretended to approve your villainy!"

"I think," Trine announced in a voice of ice—"I have learned now what I needed to know."

His fingers sought the row of buttons; and when a servant responded, he inquired:

"Mr. Narrorbat has returned?"

"He is in the waiting room, sir."

"Conduct Miss Judith to him and tell him I hold him personally responsible for her safe-keeping. He will understand."

And for a long time thereafter the father, alone with the daughter who had been estranged from him since birth by every instinct of her nature, essayed in vain to break down her mutinous silence.

At last Trine summoned two of his creatures and had her led weeping from the room to be held prisoner in her bedchamber on the topmost floor of the house.

CHAPTER XXIII.

A Sporting Offer.

Some two hours later, that same evening, Mr. Alan Law, very much alone and, in spite of a complete new outfit of ready-made clothing, looking much more like himself than he had in a fortnight, issued forth from the Grand Central station, hailed a taxicab, and had himself conveyed to the Hotel Monolith.

But if he looked his proper self once more, it speedily was demonstrated that his wish was otherwise; for after learning from the room-keeper of the Monolith that a suite was being held in the name of Arthur Lawrence, that was the name Mr. Law inscribed on the register.

On the other hand, it was his true name that he gave to the person whom he called upon the telephone immediately after being shown to his rooms. But then he was speaking to his old friend and man of business, Mr. Digby.

Within another ten minutes this last was in conference with his employer: "I think you must be out of your head," he insisted nervously, once their first greetings were over. "You might just as sensibly throw yourself from the top of the Metropolitan tower as come to New York while Trine lives and knows you're this side the water."

"Nonsense!" Alan laughed. "Remember this is New York—not the backwoods of Maine!"

Alan paused and smote his palm with a remorseful fist. "By the eternal, I'm forgetting Barcus!"

"Barcus?"

"Chap whose boat I chartered in Portland—sheer luck on my part: he's one of the salt of the earth. First, something must be done for the boy. You've got influence of some sort in New Bedford, surely?"

Digby reflected: "Some. There's George Blaine, Justice of the Peace—"

"The very man. Telegraph him in Barcus' interests immediately. And telegraph Barcus as well—send him a hundred for expenses, and tell him to join me here in New York as quick as he can!"

"Your friend's address?" Digby inquired, mildly ironic as he sat down at the desk and fumbled with the supply of stationery.

"New Bedford jail, of course!" Alan chuckled—but cut his laugh in two as something fluttered from the pack of envelopes, which Digby had disturbed.

and fell to the floor between the two men.

Face up, it grinned sardonically merrily of Alan's confidence: it was a tray of hearts.

With an ashen face and a trembling hand, Digby stooped to pick the damned thing up; but Alan was before him with him, and got his fingers first upon the card.

"Now will you believe?" Digby demanded huskily.

"In what? A simple coincidence?" Alan flouted. "Not I! Who knows I'm in New York—or that the Arthur Lawrence for whom your agent engaged those rooms was Alan Law. No, my friend: it's a bit too thick for me. Take my word for it, this is nothing more nor less than a scoundrel of a poker-party held by yesterday's tenant of this suite."

"Perhaps—perhaps!" Digby assented, stroking tremulous lips. "But I'm afraid for you, my boy. Who knows that Trine's spies were not watching my man when he made this reservation? Who knows but that 'Arthur Lawrence' was too thin a disguise for Alan Law? I tell you, I'm frightened to the marrow of my old bones! Do me this favor at least, my boy: now that you've been warned, whether by accident or design—we won't argue that—do leave town—go incognito to some quiet place near by and wait."

He could not know that another skulked behind a barrier of lime barrels and overheard all that passed and, when Alan had ducked smartly into the unfinished building, rose and stole after him with footsteps as noiseless as a cat's and a face that had the savagery of a tiger's when it was frightened.

not so much so as to seem deserving of police surveillance; in the neighborhood of the Riverside drive home of his mortal enemy, a grim white house that towered, stark and tall, upon a corner.

His preliminary reconnaissance provided little more than comfortable exercise. Huge, still, its wall bathed in the milk and ink of moonlight and shadow, all its windows dark but one—and that one, in the topmost tier, showed only a feeble glimmer, so slight that Alan almost overlooked it.

But once discovered, it focused upon itself his thoughts with a power little less than hypnotic.

He believed with small doubt that Rose was a prisoner within those walls; that Judith must have conveyed her there with all speed.

And, this being the presumptive case, that small, high window of the light might well be hers.

Directly across the street from the Trine residence, on the opposite corner, a colossal apartment structure stood half-finished, stonework to its second story, gaunt iron skeleton rearing above.

To his infinite disgust, Alan found the guardian very wide awake, very much on the job; no chance here to steal unseen into the building.

This in itself might have been deemed a suspicious circumstance: not for nothing does an honest night watchman so deny the laws of nature and the tenets of his craft. But Alan merely praised the man while cursing the very fact of his existence; and, accosting, overcame with bank-notes what seemed an uncommonly stubborn reluctance, and got his way.

beneath it a stiletto poised in his right hand to strike.

But even now Alan was in little or no better case than before. If he faced the thug, he faced him with no arms other than his bare hands. He had not even a pen knife in his pockets.

With a cry of desperation Alan snatched on his hat, a soft and shapeless felt affair, and flung it squarely in the fellow's face.

Before he could recover—before, that is, it dropped away and cleared his vision, Alan had bent forward and grasped the wrist of the hand that held the knife.

He snatched simultaneously at the other hand, but it eluded him.

Alan had this advantage, as long as the knife might not strike—that his right arm was free, while the assassin had only his left. With this he strove persistently to reach his knife-hand and possess himself of the weapon.

As persistently Alan foiled his purpose by dragging the knife-hand toward him and swinging it far out to one side. At the same time he struck repeatedly with his clenched right fist at the other's face. His blows did little damage beyond disconcerting the other; but this proved a very considerable factor in the duel. In the end, they served together with that steady, relentless downward and outward drag to break the grip of the man's locked legs.

Abruptly he pitched forward on his face along the girder, kicking wildly, grasping at the air. The stiletto fell from an instinctively relaxed grasp, and disappeared. And before Alan could release his hold, or ease the strain upon the right arm of the assassin, this last had slipped bodily from the girder and hung helpless in space, dangling at the end of Alan's arm—with no more than the grip of five fingers between him and death.

The shock of that unprepared turn brought Alan forward and flat on his stomach. And the strain on his left arm was terrific. He doubted if he could maintain it for another minute. Nor was there any reason why he should retain it. The end he had designed for his victim was merely his just desert.

And yet Alan could not let him go. Thus the battle began anew—but now it was a battle with a man half-crazed and struggling so madly that he well-nigh frustrated the efforts of his rescuer.

In the upshot the assassin lay like a limp rag across the girder, head and arms dangling on one side, legs and feet on the other, spent with his terrific exertions and physically sick with terror.

And in this state Alan left him: he had done enough; let the man shift for himself from this time on.

Typical Scenes of War Now Being Waged Abroad

TSINGTAU BARRACKS STILL HOLD OUT AGAINST THE JAPS, BUT MUST FALL SOON

Here are the Tsingtau barracks, which the Japanese have made an objective point. While the main barracks still hold out against the attacks, Japs have succeeded in taking the right wing of the fortress, and in all likelihood will be entirely successful within a few weeks.

HUNDREDS OF FRENCH AND BELGIAN PRISONERS MARCH THROUGH BRUSSELS

(c) Underwood & Underwood.

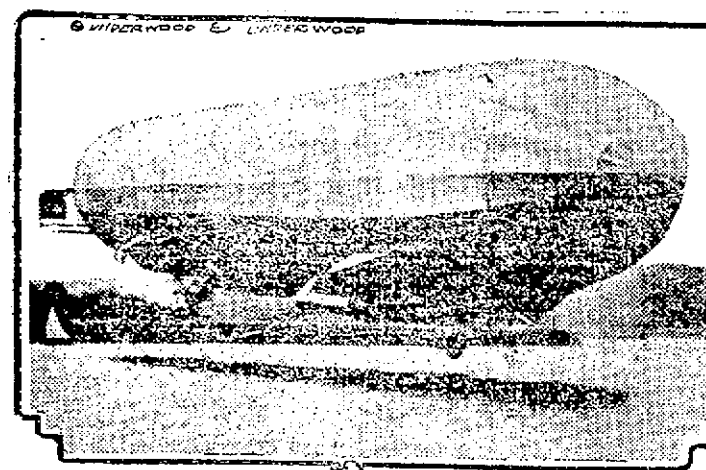

Here are a few of the hundreds of French and Belgian prisoners of war who have marched through Brussels during the past few weeks on their way to Germany. Correspondents in Brussels report that the prisoners seem very downcast, despite the good treatment accorded them by the Germans.

CZAR INSPECTS PETROGRAD'S HOSPITALS

Arrow points to Czar Nicholas.

Anxious that his wounded soldiers should have every possible attention, Czar Nicholas recently visited the army hospitals of Petrograd. In this photo he is seen with the doctors, nurses and attendants of one of the hospitals which he inspected while on his tour.

"Hansa" returning to Potsdam after reconnoitering trip.

The Hansa, which is here shown making a landing, is one of many dirigibles used by the German army in locating the position of the enemy and in making night raids into the enemy's country. Big airships like this have dropped many bombs on the city of Antwerp.

VON MOLTKE'S SUCCESSOR A DARK HORSE

(c) Underwood & Underwood.

General Voigts-Rhetz.

General Voigts-Rhetz, who succeeds Count Von Moltke as chief of the German general staff, may be described as a dark horse. His father was a great soldier who rose to high rank in the ministry of war and commanded a division in 1870. It remains to be seen whether Voigts-Rhetz has inherited his father's ability and whether he is a better man than the one he displaced.

MURDER THOUSANDS OF YEARS AGO A MYSTERY

Los Angeles, Oct. 17.—Scientists are trying today to penetrate the oldest murder mystery of the Pacific coast. The crime, according to the investigators, was committed thousands of years ago. Naturally, the names of the principals are not known. The only evidence is the skeleton of a woman which was found in the famous La Brea asphaltum pits near Los Angeles, where paleontologists have unearthed the bones of historic horses, sabre-toothed tigers and other beasts. Experts opinion agree that the position of the body indicated the woman had been thrown head first into the pit. A more complete hypothesis included a blow on the head, possibly from the club of a cave man. Learned men from a dozen universities are interesting themselves in the mystery.

FRENCH PEASANTS BURYING GERMAN DEAD ON THE BATTLEFIELD

French peasants, called from the battlefield, are here seen preparing the graves for the hosts of dead German soldiers left behind by the Kaiser's forces on the battlefields of the Marne.

GERMANS PASS THROUGH VILLAGE SET ON FIRE BY SHELLS

ODD LOOKING RUSSIAN MACHINE GUN INTERESTS GERMANS

This odd looking machine gun, captured from the Russians, greatly interested the soldiers and people of Berlin on its arrival there. It is unlike anything in the German war equipment. Photo was taken in Berlin.

This photo shows one of the 200 rapid firing howitzers of the French army which is being used in driving the retreating Germans before the allies. The howitzer is mounted on the flat car of a war train. The gun and carriage itself is protected by an armored shield. Folding arms swing from both sides of the car when the howitzer is ready to discharge its death-dealing messengers. These arms prevent the car from being overturned from the shock of the concussion.

AT THE MYERS.

An excellent vaudeville program and a full program of interesting pictures are the attraction at the Myers Theatre tonight and Sunday. The complete program which is announced elsewhere on this page is one that will please all who see it.

Every act is a good one. The Florenz Trio are as clever a trio of acrobats as have been seen here. Lillian Gonne has the ability of a musical comedy star.

"HE FELL IN LOVE WITH HIS WIFE."

The United Play company's production of "He Fell in Love With His Wife" will be seen at Myers theater on Thursday, Oct. 22, matinee and night. Although it has been enjoyed by hundreds of thousands of readers it has never until now been offered here on the stage. Even the most casual theatergoer who has read the novel of E. P. Roe will recognize its great dramatic possibilities and it is doubtful whether any other American playwright could have done the book so complete justice as this author, H. S. Sheldon, for he is at his best in the creation of quaint types and in "He Fell in Love With His Wife" he has found an abundance of material.

In its stage form, "He Fell in Love With His Wife" is really the dramatization of the book, not merely a play founded upon the incidents in Mr. Roe's novel. The story has been retained in its entirety and the playwright has developed with sympathetic appreciation the sturdy character of Holcroft, the farmer, and the deeply religious and loving nature of Alida, the betrayed girl, with whom he enters into a business marriage, the girl agreeing to attend to her duties as housewife, while he, on his part, provides her with the shelter of a good country home.

The slow growth of a genuine and deep rooted love between these two, the inevitable misunderstanding which leads each to believe that the other seeks to keep merely adherence to the terms of their carriage contract, and the final explanation into a nearer relation which has hitherto been denied them, makes a most interesting scene.

The dramatic incidents of the novel all find their place in the play. There is a bog country mob scene, in which the hoodlums of the community go to the Holcroft home to charivari its owner and his bride, and to taunt a tremendous scene near the play's close, when, in the absence of Holcroft, Ferguson, the girl's betrayer, appears upon the scene and demands that she return to him. The United Play company has provided an exceptionally good cast for this production of "He Fell in Love With His Wife," headed by Gertrude Ritchie, who has appeared in a number of their previous successes.

AT THE APOLLO

Good Vaudeville Bill.—One of the best collections of vaudeville acts that has even been seen in the city is now on the boards at the Apollo. There are three feature acts and these will continue until Sunday night.

On Sunday in addition to the vaudeville the great world international auto races at Indianapolis will be shown in motion pictures. Views of the tracks, the racers, the crowds, and all interesting races will be shown.

"THE LIGHTNING CONDUCTOR."—Dustin Farnum and William Elliott are featured in the photo play dramatization of "The Lightning Conductor," which has been adapted from the celebrated novel by the Williamsons. "The Lightning Conductor" is a motor car romance of Southern Europe, will be presented at the Apollo Monday afternoon and evening.

Molly Randolph, a wealthy American girl in London with her aunt, invests in a motor car, which is described to her by the agent to be "as good as new." She uses the last of her allowance to pay for same, and wires her indulgent father to send her more funds, which he does. Molly engages a chauffeur and with her aunt starts on a tour from London through southern Europe. Her first mishap occurs when but a few miles from London, and from then on the "just as good as new" car breaks down at very frequent intervals. During one of these breakdowns, the Hon. John Winston happens along in his car, and is mistaken for a chauffeur by Molly. He does not correct this impression, but passes himself off as his own chauffeur.

Dustin Farnum as the Hon. John Winston, posing as Brown the chauffeur, makes the place of Molly's driver, and the adventures they all have has certainly filled the original book and fills the play with interest from beginning to end.

THE LAST VOLUNTEER.

A bonafide war drama, not professing to be connected in any way with the present struggle, will meet with great success at the present time. The picture is a story of the life of almost every person in the world, and every person knows that actual pictures of the present war are unobtainable. But this picture deals with a situation in Europe which precipitated war, and the spectator is given such a vivid idea of the horrors of warfare that he can readily imagine the present case in Europe. The battle scenes are most realistic, even an aeroplane is seen dropping bombs on the opposing forces with deadly results, and through the whole picture runs a beautiful love story, just strong enough to knit the political controversies and battle scenes together and never for an instant allowing one's interest to falter.

Still another essential in favor of the success of the production is its able cast. Crane Wilbur Cummings takes the part of Prince Ludwig, head of the Province of Sax-Noburg; Eleanor Woodruff as Katrina, the inn keeper's daughter, makes a charming heroine; Paul Panzer is excellent as the ambassador of Australia; Robert Broderick, E. C. Hoyt, Mary Gray, Harold Crane and A. H. Barstar complete the cast.

This picture will be seen in six reels at the Apollo on Tuesday.

"THE FORTUNE HUNTER."—The Lubin photoplay, masterpiece. "The Fortune Hunter" will be presented in six reels at the Apollo again next Wednesday. Adapted from the stage success, it has been made even a greater success in motion pictures. William Elliott is seen in the part of the young man who was advised to move to a small town in order to secure a fortune.

The advice was to attend church regularly, dress with great care but plainly, cut out smoking and drinking. In fact, to stifle himself as a model man. It was predicted that he would soon attract every young lady in the village and he had but to select the richest one and a fortune was his.

How he does this is well known to those who have read the story or have seen the play. He does as directed, meets the rich girl but turns her down for the daughter of a poor druggist whose business he puts on its feet. He then turns to a model man for himself a fortune and the girl he loves. It is a play that holds one's attention from beginning to end.

LITTLE MISS GONNE

MAKES HIT OF SHOW

Myers Theatre Patrons See Three Very Good Acts.

Little Miss Gonne with her partner, Mr. Livesey received the popular applause of the capacity houses at the Myers last night. Three very good acts were presented but "vaudeville daintiest pair" were worth the price of admission alone. This little lady carried the house on her personality. Her whistling and singing started the audience laughing and kept them so.

The Florenz Trio are acrobats of no small ability and add to their work a continuous bit of comedy. Their act opens in a restaurant and from that on to the finish the action is fast. Stone and King offer clever songs and jokes that were very well received.

The Perdue football squad were present in a group as the guests of the Gazette. They favored the audience with a couple of their college songs and the response they received showed that they were surrounded by friends.

Troy O' Hearts—The manner in which this eighth episode of the "Troy O' Hearts" was applauded demonstrated how popular this thrilling serial story and play has become in Janesville.

"JOSEPH" SHOW

BIG AS CIRCUS

When "Joseph and His Brethren" comes to the Grand opera house, Rockford, Oct. 19-20, Rockford and Janesville will see one of the largest indoor spectacles in local theatrical history. It exceeds "Kismet" in size, which probably was the largest production ever attempted here.

The road tour will be made by 105 persons, in addition to this number there will be sixty-one supernumeraries, men and women. Manager Grampp of the Rockford house, contracts to provide sixty-four stage hands. Four men will be employed.

Government Kept Going.

"I notice that the old man's quit cussin' the government?" "Yes; after tryin' it for 30 year the government kept a-goin', jes' like it never heard tell of him—never so much as askin' him to please let up an' give it a chance to grow up with the country. That made him so mad he was too full fer utterance, he was struck speechless!"

Would Be Second Choice.

Little Helen had received a package through the mail from her Aunt Edith containing patterns for two dresses, one pink and one blue. One was intended for her and the other for her little sister, Dorothy. While examining the dresses, she exclaimed: "The little dear may have her choice, but I'll take the pink one."
